THE IRON WORKERS' STRILE

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 10—A meeting was held thus afternoon by the several from workers' unions, at which it was resolved to maintain the strike. Statements were drawn up, addressed to the companies, to the effect that if they would express any willingness to modify the reduction of 15 per cent. In wages which they made it would receive every consideration at the hands of the various unions. As the unions have tale-graphed the situation of affaire to the various easiern unloss, with the object of preventing any workene caching here to take the alices of the strikers, it is believed that a c. ...romise will be effected, on the basis that the workness will be effected, on the basis that the workness will accept a temporary reduction, but that the old rate will be re-established when the condition of bushess on the casal will warrant it. THE OREGONIAN has never entertained a real hope that it would be possible to finding the present legislature to do anything with the assessment laws. Perhaps it never keil be possible. Our legislators represent the people pretty faithfully; and the people are far from taking an intelligent view of the subject of assessment amendment of the laws' elating to assessment and taxation there is an element of theorems and prejudice, and an element of dishomesty. The first it may be possible to obscrome in time, but the lost is extremely stubbe in and perfect, stent. What makes the matter! the present is the fact that the three things, igno rance, prejudice and dishonesty, are all supporting each other. The combination makes a formidable trigity. Concentrated upon a single purpose, they put in the way of reform a barriage. ier Lot easily shaken. Ignorance resists amendment of these laws because it is unable to see how their amend-ment would introduce more equilible taxation. Prejudice resists it, because ofthe belief enter-tained in some parts of the state that ther parts of the state would obtain advantages it the as-sessment laws were recast, and local feeling therefore comes in to support the opposition to necessary change. Distancesty resists it, the-carse the present laws, and particularly that feature of them which permits deduction of debts afford the most perfect opportunity ever devised for cancellation of values on the assessment rolls, and consequent y for the shirking of taxes. This dishoresfy out if not stand alone, but it has in ignorance and prejudice such powerful props and auxiliaries as guable it to defy : Il correction and redress. And yet the evils of our system are so plain as to make quite inexcusable the neglect of the people to correct them. Undervaluation of property, especially real property, is everywhere apparent. It is notorious that real property apparent. It is notorious that real property throughout the state is not rated on the assess-ment rolls at above one-third of its value. This is apparent in city and country alike. But bey and credits are taxed at the r full now money and creams are made, at the r pure monitorial value, and this throws upon one ispecies of properly most unequal burdens. When it is observed, too, that this species of projectly is that which chiefly gives life and activity to movements of business, and that this unperial taxation of foods to movements. mente of manness, and that this unpqual taxa-tion of it lends to suppress it, everyone ought to be able to see the consequence. Money hides away. (Tedits are refused. Loans cannot be had. In short, business is cull or dead. But if property in other forms were set down for taxa-tion at such values, or near such raities, as it actually ressesses. actually possesses, so that loans and credit would not come in for double or quadruple tax-ation, all the morements of business would be more easy and free. Under the present laws the people might make this correction if they would. They could permit their assessors to do would. They could permit their as 4680018 to do their duty as the law requires by listing property at its actual cash value instead for compelling them to commit perjury and assis fraud by studied and systematized undervaluations. And the legislature, if the people would permit it, could repeat the statute that allows fee action of daha and oness the door to the greatest fraud debts and opens the door to the greatest fraud

In maintaining their present position as to assertment of property for taxation the people are standing persistently and obtth ately in their own light. They bring upon themselves unequal burdens, they reard the lodustrial progress of the state, and they make plad the bearts of rasculs, whose pan is legion, whom they enable year after year to escape taxation. The Springfield Republican says that Masso-

The state board which supervises these matters is now prepared to go a step further and recommend the boarding out of the linear under careful supervision, and thus check the domaid for more assumed.

Congress has had abundant posice of the day-Congress has had abundant notice of the darager from silver coinage. In his had unual message the president organ the silver widate suspension of the coinage of silver dollars and of the issuance of silver certificates. The secretary of the treasury in his report sails: "A large part of our paper currency base I'm, coin is worth only about eighty-live cents or a lollar. But still neither party is a xicus to allow any legislation on the subject.

NATIONAL OR SEDERAL In the platform adopted by the last republican national convention it is declared that "the people of the United States in their organize! Expacity constituted a Nation (spelled with reptal istim, mixal, and not a mure confederate of states; and that "the National government is amorphic within the spings of its usional day, etc." The democratic hational convention the same year used the worl "federal" is referring to the government. In 1876 the a-tional republican convention for the first time adopted the use of the words "nation" and "no-tional" in sidaking of the United States and their government. At that time the republicans declared that Pilio United States of America is a Nation, not a league." In 1880 they declared that "the conditation of the United States is a supreme kee, and a league." and that "out of onfederale states it made a sovereign nation." continerate rates it made a sovereign nation. In the platfe fin of 1805 and 1850 the republicans referred to the constitution as the "fed-cut constitution" and to the "government as the "fed-cut government," and in 1872 they used the words "friderid legislation."

Senator Morton of Indian, it troduced resolutions in the United States senal a e declaring substantially what has since been asserted on this point by the republican platforms. But his resolutions were hald upon the table and ho subsequent action was taken with reference to them. A few days afterwards Senator Wythe of Maryland introduced a resolution declaring that this is a federal government. Sec. declaring that this is a federal government, &c., which was disposed of the same way. This declaring that the is a federal government, acc, which was disposed of the same way. This question was very fully and earnestly discussed. Those who opposed its adoption the solid so objetty because it was intended, as they understood, to constitute a national government, and Story, who treats the question at some leight in his comments on the constitution—though he desired commit thinself positively to either view-says that its advocates favored its adoption technical that its advocates favored its adoption because they also understood that it was intended to constitute a national government. There would seem, therefore, to have been no dissent among the founders of the government from the idea that the constitution was intended to make the constitution. was intended to make a sovereign nation out of the previously confederated states; and it is no less clear that it was adopted for that purpose. What many ripublicans now claim is that this intention was not fully and actually realized until the doctrine of states rights was demoi-ist edit by bothil war. ished by the civil war.

It is on this point that republicans and donocrite now separate as parties more completely, perhaps, than on any other. In a general way it may be said that the republicans hold to what is called "the centralizing policy," magnifying the double and authority of the federal govern-ment, carrying with it the recognition of the right of congress to ejact laws on almost every whilect, even where there is no constitutional subject, even where there is no constitutional provision for such legislation, and governing every part of the country, as far as practicable, at Wrshippton. This was very positively manifested in the late decision of the supreme court on the legal tender cases, to which only along Field, the democratic member of the bench, dissorted. The republican doctrine is the embodiment of the idea that the United States are a nation, instead of a federal republic with a central government of limited powers; that it is what to have a unational banking system, a unitoral quarrantine, a national board of beautiff, a while to have a limitonal banking system, a national quarantine, a national board of beatti, a national board of beatti, a national beard of edipertion, a national supervision of the elections; in short, a general regulation of all important matters by federal mucho ity. In states where the republicans are in power the tendency is,—though this is not uniform among them.—to centralize the control of form among them,—to centralize the control of proper municipal atfairs at the state capital, to appoint police commissioners, to amend char-ters legislating city officials in or out of office, to govern in local matters by commissions in-stead of by officers elected by the people.

The democrats on the other hand favor local

The democrals on the other hand favor local self-government, the limitation of the consideration by a strict construction of the constitutions, the denial to the Washington marshabs of the polyser to appoint federal inspectors and supervise not election, armed or otherwise, to interfere with the citizens at the polys, and in general the conservation in the hands of the people and the local government of their selection of all the rights and powers in it delegated to the United States in the fundamental law.

These opposite views, we repeat, illustrate the general character of the two parties. The parties are not whelly divided on these questions. It was a democratic legislature, for example, which passed the prohibitory law in Maine. Several democratis in congress also voted for national aid to education has rear, which a few republicans voted against it. But, however, the two parties are differ in the new

while a few republicans voted against it. But, however, the two parties may differ in the use of words, or in sentiments as expressed in platforms, there is practical unanimity among all ar geople on the main idea that this is a non, and that the government has inational furnishment, whether the war has isdiction and power. Whether the war has practically done mything to intensify this idea or not, it is doubless true that the tendency is now very generally and strongly towards the recognition and assertion of the unity and pow-er of the national government. When people epen of their country they mean the Onited States. The use of the word American is becoming more common to designate our citizen-ship and our common policy. The use of this war tends to strengthen the patriotic sontiment of our people, and therefore it ought to be encouraged. As Washington soid, the name Ame ican, which belongs to us in our national raignly must always exait the just pride or a patri diem. Itar takes a practical view of the Egyptian situation and is co-operating with England in the most effectual manner. While the troops already kinded in Stakem will push into the or and relieve Kassala, others will reliev the English grifsons at Alexandria, Cairo and other points in lower Enyp', tous permitting those troops to join the force a under General Wolseler. By this include England can use every available man in that country, and Italy. as England's ally, secures itself in the posser-sion of a fair share of the spoils when El Mahdi

To the Edition of The Originalian
The cut in our assessment laws would be remedied if the assessor would get a percent. nstead of a per diem allowance, as at present. instead of a per diem allowance, as at present. It would be an inducement to the basessor to assess, properly according to law a: its full cash value. It would be money in his pocket to keep his oath of office, and be would be loser by going contrary to law. Take for instante Matton or Polk, or for that, any county in the state. As at present assessed, at haff value or less, the assessor gets about, say three mills od, the dollar. Let three mills be his par, and I assure you have will see to it that the assessment rol will roll up will see to it that the assessment rol will roll up double its present amount. Instead of making $350 for his services, he will make $70, and do his conscience justice.

Policeman Hudson swears to the conquiant. It would be interesting to know why this man Young has been permatted to rob the city for nevery half of the entire quarter for which he should have paid his license, instead of being arrested when the allowed time had expired. Pethips this may be brought out in the rual. It has been said that one or two counciliner, who represent the whisky element, and care nore for the benefit they can derive therefrom than for any duty they owe to the city, have interested themselves to that extent that quite a number of sation-keepes were permitted to go on selling whisky without a hoense, and some, besides this man Young, who has been arrested, are still violating the law. Young was not leathful with heing a lawbreater, but wanted to be one in secret. He particularly rentested the police that they should not, the police and not not appear.
